

Meet the HENRYs

*Positioning for the
Mindset of the HENRYs –
High Earners Not Rich Yet*

Presented by Pam Danziger, Unity Marketing

©Unity Marketing, 2015

Introduction	2
State of Luxury Market 2015	5
Understanding the Luxury Consumer Market	9
Demographics of HENRYs	11
Market Potential HENRYs	14
Shinola, Black Box Wines & Patagonia Targets HENRYs	16
Education & Career	20
Marital Status & Family	23
Trunk Club Appeals to HENRY	25
Age of Affluence	26
When Will Next Luxury Boom Arrive?	30
Understanding Purchase Behavior of HENRYs	33
HENRY Luxury Spending	38
HENRYs Demand for Luxury Same as Ultras	41
Alex & Ani Hits Right Notes for HENRYs	42
How HENRYs Define Luxury	45
JW Hulme Targets Quality & Value	48
Personalities of Luxury & How to Sell to Each	49
HENRY Luxury Personalities	51
HENRYs' Luxury Lifestyle & Value	76
How Canada Goose Targets HENRY	78
How Coach Bridged Gap to Male HENRYs	80

Table of Contents

Five Key Marketing Strategies for Success with HENRYs	81
Caution Using 'L-Word'	82
Lincoln May Have Missed the Memo	86
Kia Tells a New Luxury Story	87
Position around Smart Shopper	88
Costco Is Where Smart Shoppers Shop	89
Create Buzz around Set of Defined Values	90
How Leo Schachter Did It for Diamonds	91
Maker's 46 Explains its Luxury	93
Don't Overdo Status & Image	94
Timex Create an Anti-Status Status Symbol Watch	95
In Shopping, Success Is in the Details	97
Apple Transformed Technology Shopping Experience	98
HENRY Marketing Opportunities	100
Integrate: HENRYs Are Entry to New Luxury Market	101
Innovate: HENRYs Looking for New Ways to Express Luxury, without Spending Ridiculous Amounts of Money	102
Bare Escentuals Innovated Beauty	104
Inspire: Inspire HENRYs with New Stories of Luxury	105
HENRYs & Responsible Consumerism	106
The RealReal, Rent the Runway, Bag Borrow or Steal, Zip Car	108
Technology Levels the Playing Field for HENRY	113
Where HENRYs Will Find Luxury in Future	116

Table of Contents

▪ Meet the HENRYs: Gatekeepers to the New Luxury Market and the New Target for Mass-Market Brands

- Meet the HENRYs, High-Earners-Not-Rich-Yet consumers with household incomes between $100k and $250k. HENRYs are the new face of the mass-market customer, since the traditional middle-class ($50k-$99.9k) have lost so much discretionary spending power in the recent recession.
- HENRYs are doing better than nearly 80% of U.S. households, but they are a far cry from wealthy; reserve that adjective for the ultra-affluents, who earn more than $250K per year, and for those with high net worth, with amassed wealth of more than $1M.
- The HENRYs are the unassuming mass segment of the affluent consumer market, and critically important for all brands and all marketers to understand. For mass-marketers, HENRYs offer growth possibilities unmatched by the middle-class consumer segment. While the overall number of households grew only 2.5% from 2010-2013, the number of HENRY households rose 11% in the same time.
- For marketers aimed at the high-end, the HENRYs are the gatekeepers to the luxury market now and for the future, since ultra-affluent and wealthy customers typically start out as HENRYs on their road to affluence.
- The recently updated for 2015, this Unity Marketing Trend Report, "Meet the HENRYs," highlights just why these lower-income affluents are so important to marketers at all pricing levels, high-end, low-end and in between. "Coming out of the recession, the true middle class severely limited in their ability to purchase goods and services in the near future," says Pam Danziger, president of Unity Marketing and author of the report. "This means HENRYs are the 'new mass market' for marketers and brands up and down the pricing scale."
- The HENRYs are ready to respond in force, if not necessarily in high levels of individual spending to brands that connect with their mindset and values. While HENRYs spend about half as much as do ultra-affluents on luxury and high end purchases, their significantly greater numbers (24.3 million households) mean that the total value of the HENRY market is about four times that of the ultra-affluent market (3.3 million households).
- "Marketers have historically felt that ultra-affluents were their ideal consumer, but there simply aren't enough ultra-affluents to keep luxury brands afloat in today's market," says Danziger. "Instead, luxury brands need to broaden their reach to include these consumers. This creates a unique challenge, as they are now competing with mass-market brands that also need to tap into HENRY spending now that the middle-class have lost so much discretionary spending power."
- Danziger also found that targeting HENRYs is a sound strategy for helping brands position themselves in the future. "While it is typical for brands to identify a target customer and stick with this demographic as it ages, today's luxury brands need to look at young HENRY consumers age 25-34. As these younger affluents mature, their incomes will rise, making this population the source of most of tomorrow's ultra-affluents. Luxury brands that want to continue to reach the highest income customers need to reach out to slightly less affluent Millennials today."

Meet the HENRYs –

Positioning for the Mindset of the Mass Affluent High-Earners-Not-Rich-Yet and Gatekeepers to the New Luxury Market

©Unity Marketing, 2015